MINISTER OF MILITIA PROMISES NAPANEE A DRILL HALL

Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, paid Napanee a visit on Friday to look over available sites for a drill hall and to deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Napanee I. O. D. E. Col. Hughes was met at the station by members of the council and a number of citizens and driven around the town to inspect the available sites after which he addressed a large meeting of citizens in the town hall. Col. Hughes expressed his approval of the site on Centre street west the market square, taking in the property owned by the town and a portion of the surrounding properties. The Minister of Militia is strongly in favor of erecting drill halls in every town and city to serve as a gathering place and an incentive to the youth of the Dominion of Canada to make themselves self controlled, erect, decent and patriotic citizens through military and physical training, instead of growing up as under present conditions of uncontrolled gadding about the streets, growing up into young ruffians or gadabouts with no purpose in life. Military training insures peace by a national preparedness for all eventualities and the making of the drill halls throughout Canada, clean, wholesome, sober and attractive places for the youth and young men of Canada and to give the final touch to imperial unity and crown the arch of responsible government. Uriah Wilson, Esq., ex M. P., presided and the Minister of Militia promised that the government will erect a drill hall in Napanee either in Napanee this year or next. At the close of the meeting a vote of thanks was tendered Col. Hughes. At the evening meeting in Trinity Church, Mrs. A. T. Harshaw, regent of the local chapter of the I. O. D. E., presided. With Col. Hughes were Messrs. W. J. Paul, M. P. and W. Hepburn, M. P. for Prince Edward. The large audience present thoroughly enjoyed Col. Hughes' address. Col. Hughes asked the co-operation of the ladies patriotic associations to actively co-operate with him in improving the tone and morals of the militia camps. Liquor was now barred and healthy amusements and entertainments should take its place at the camps. The proceeds of the lecture go toward the new Sir Oliver Morvat tuberculosis hospital in Kingston from Napanee. Col. Hughes went to Picton where he addressed the meeting of the Prince Edward Conservative Association.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
Feb. 3rd, 1913.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor W. A. Steacy in the chair.

Present—Reeve Osborne and Councillors Alexander, Walters, Simpson, Graham, Carson and Dickinson.

The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from E. W. Conger offering the sum of $15 for the old barn on the isolation hospital grounds in Salem.

Moved by Reeve Osborne, seconded by Coun. Graham, that the offer be accepted. Lost.

Moved by Coun. Walters, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that the matter be left in the hands of the Town Property Committee to report. Carried.

Mr. Allan Neilson made application for the office of assessor for the year 1913, at a salary of $175.

Ordered laid on the table until by-law is introduced for the appointment of an assessor.

A communication was read from Mr. D. Pizzariello tendering for the caretaking of the Harvey Warner Park and for the turning on and off the lights for the year 1913, for which he asked the sum of $125.

Referred to the Town Property Committee to report.

A communication was read from Mr. G. B. Curran, asking that no charge be made for the use of the town hall on January 23rd, when it was used for the purpose of the seed judging, and also that no charges be made when the hall was used for other courses of a like nature.

The council was of the opinion that it could not grant the request and no action was taken.

A communication was read from the Dominion of Canada Guarantee and Accident Co., stating that the bonds of the tax collector had expired.

Referred to the Finance Committee with power to act.

Dr. Boyce, Superintendent of the Kingston General Hospital, addressed the council in reference to a grant towards the maintenance of the institution which he represented. He gave a short description of the history of the hospital from the time of its inception in 1812 up to the present time. He spoke very kindly of the support given the hospital by the Ladies' Aid Society of Napanee. He hoped the council could see its way clear to make a $300 donation to the hospital this year, and proceeded to explain that even this amount would not cover the cost of caring for the patients of this municipality who go or are sent to this institution for treatment.

Dr. Vrooman also made a few remarks on the question.

The gentlemen were given to understand that when the estimates for the year were brought down the request would be dealt with in as liberal a manner as the finances of the town would admit.

DEP ON FIGHTING.

VICAR IS MISSING.

Great Britain Is Greatly Exercised Over Cliff Mystery.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—A sensational development took place yesterday in what is known as the cliff mystery.

On Jan. 13 Rev. Albert Knight, vicar of Hunslet, Yorkshire, disappeared, and it is supposed he met his death by falling from the Flambor-ough Cliffs while taking a photograph.
Mrs. Knight stated she witnessed the accident. Ever since the quest for the body among the cliffs has been continued, often at the risk of the searchers' lives, and a week ago a special memorial service was held in the church, supposedly for the dead vicar.

The Chief Constable of Leeds now
announces that Mr. Knight is alive, and has left the country under an assumed name. The constable says
he gives the information in fairness
to the public, but adds that the details are confidential.

Another mystery exercising the minds of British newspaper readers
is the fate of Sir Walter Strickland, Bart., who was last heard from on Dec. 1. He was then in the south of France. Strickland was an extraordinary character. He was a scholar, an anarchist and a gypsy, and for thirty years wandered over the world
pantomizing, translating Horace and Moliere, and getting into trouble in most civilized countries through writing violent pamphlets and verses against the established order of things. Strickland was only once in London. This was in 1909, when he succeeded to the title. He only stayed here a week. He had two adopted sons, who are left without resources.
Neither his lawyers nor his publishers can get any trace of him.

HIS OWN POEM READ.

The Late Dr. Beattie Nesbitt Is Buried
In Toronto.

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—Together with a grief-stricken family and relatives,
hundreds of citizens of this city paid
their last tributes to the late Dr.
Beattie Nesbitt at his funeral from 71
Grosvenor street, his late residence, yesterday afternoon. The service at the house was conducted by the Ven.
Archdeacon Cody, who also, with District Master George Rowe, W. J.
Stathers and District Chaplain W. T.
Hockins of the Loyal Orange Order,
read the services at the chapel in St. James' Cemetery.

Strikingly appropriate to the occasion Archdeacon Cody, in the course of the service at the family residence,
read, at the request of Mrs. Nesbitt,
a poem of three stanzas, composed
by the former Conservative member on his sick bed last Christmas Day.
The last stanza is as follows:

"Looking, they felt that wondrous love—
Messages to man from God above,
Who gave His own to suffer and die,
From lowly manger to cross on high.
For thus He sought to make it plain
That only through love can we end

SESSION OPENS TO-DAY

Legislature to Begin With Pomp
and Circumstance.

Speech From the Throne Will Refer to General Prosperity of the Province and General Program of Development Will Probably Be Outlined—Compensation Report To Be Foreshadowed.

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—With the booming of cannon this afternoon the legislative mill will again begin to grind
out new laws in the interest of all classes. For then the second session of the thirteen Legislature is opened with all the usual pomp and ceremony—which lasts about twenty minutes—before a large throng of digni-taries in all walks of life. The chamber this year presents an entirely new appearance. The walls and ceilings
have been renovated, new carpets
have been laid, and in fact there has been a general house-cleaning, preparatory to the opening of the Legislature
by the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir John Gibson.

Sir John Gibson will make reference to the satisfactory condition of agriculture in Ontario during the past year, notwithstanding the unusual conditions which prevailed. This fact,
he will say, testifies to the diversity
and stability of this great industry.
Satisfaction will be expressed at the new arrangement with the Dominion authorities whereby the Federal Department of Agriculture assist the Provincial Departments in their work.
The general prosperity of the province
as indicated by the large number of immigrants, who have settled in Ontario, will be referred to, along with the extensions and operations of the Government railway and the very considerable output of the mines.

He will mention the progress of the Central Prison Farm at Guelph, and the new asylum for the insane at Whitby, as well as other Government works, such as the Government House and the Parliament Buildings. It will also be intimated that the extension of agricultural education as well as the new provision for industrial training are showing satisfactory results.
The Hydro-Electric Commission will be commended for its greatly increased business and reduction of rates to

VILLAGE LIFE IN EGYPT.

Crude Mud Houses, the Roofs of Which Are Garbage Dumps.

Egyptian village life is quaint and interesting, says the Wide World Magazine. The houses are crude, one storied structures of sun baked mud, with possibly a couple of tiny square holes cut in the wall for ventilation.

Each home consists of a single room, absolutely devoid of furniture, one or two drinking jars and cooking utensils being usually the only articles to be seen. The roofs of these hovels are thatched with cornstalks, and for some unaccountable reason all the household rubbish is dumped on the roof. For this purpose a ladder may frequently be seen reclining against the side of the house. From a distance a village is apt to look like an immense rubbish heap. These primitive erections are inhabited solely by the fellahs, as Egyptian peasants are called.

In some of the Arab villages the arrangements for sleeping are even more unconventional. Huge cuplike structures made of mud are built out in the open, away from the houses, and in these the babies are frequently placed during the day, and often the entire family sleep in them at night. The idea is to escape the numerous snakes and scorpions which abound during the great heat of the summer.

POISON IN ITS AIR.

Java's Valley of Death, Where Life Cannot Exist.

The Valley of Death is on the island of Java. It is the most remarkable natural example of an atmosphere loaded with carbonic acid gas in existence. It has never been fully explored because of the danger of remaining more than a few moments in its poisonous atmosphere.

Approached through an opening between the hills, it is seen to be an oval shaped valley about half a mile across. It is about thirty-five feet deep. The bottom is hard and sandy, without vegetation and strewn with large stones. The surface is covered with the bones of animals, birds and human beings.

Explorers seldom venture beyond the borders, though the deadly air does not immediately affect human beings. This is because the carbonic acid gas, being

THE CUTTLEFISH.

Its Queer Ink Sac and Its Ability to Change Its Color.

Sepla is a peculiar animal substance obtained from the ink bags or ink sacs of cuttlefish.

The cuttlefish are a group of singular sea creatures allied to slugs, snails, oysters and other so called "shell fish." The cuttlefish has a sort of shell beneath the skin (sold under the name of "cuttlebone"), a pair of large eyes and a horny beak. Like all molluscs, they have no real limbs at all, but from around the bend there spring eight or ten long tentacles, each armed with numerous suckers.

By forcibly squirting out the sea water which it has taken in the sepla can shoot backward through the water with great speed. The sepla is interesting, too, as being able to change its color in a measure so as to harmonize with its surroundings. Just under the topmost layer of skin there are distributed all over the surface of the body a number of cells, containing a dark pigment. When these cells are expanded the surface of the body becomes darkly spotted, but as they are contracted the creature looks paler.

Though best developed in the sepla and its nearest allies, nearly every member of the cuttlefish group possesses an ink sac. The ink sac contains the dark pigment secreted by a special gland. When discovered or pursued by an enemy the sepla discharges some of its ink through a sort of funnel or tube. The pigment mixes with water very quickly and forms a dark cloud of inky water, beyond which the sepla will dart into safety.

Sepias are often caught in nets with fish. The fishermen, despising the cuttles, throw them out upon the beach, and then they may be seen lying in tiny pools of dense black liquid and continually oozing out more ink in a vain attempt at concealment.—Chicago Tribune.

SERVIA AS A NATION.

It Originated in the First Half of the Seventh Century.

The birth of Servia as a nation, settled in or near its present home, may be dated in the first half of the seventh century. About 600 A. D., when the Avaric empire of desolation was established on the Danube, two tribes, the Croats and the Serbs, retiring before the ravages of the Tartar horsemen, settled in the countries now known as Croatia, Bosnia and Servia.

They were Slavs, but the Croats perhaps had, like the Slavs of Moesia in after years, adopted the name of a Tartar tribe. Both, fleeing from the Avars, were naturally hostile to them, and it is possible that they settled in the empire with the consent or even at the invitation of the Emperor Heraclius I. At any rate, they appear to have been considered as vassals of the empire. Their first settlements lay rather westward of the country now called Servia, the Drave, the present western boundary, being the dividing line between Bulgar and Serb in the eighth century. Here the Serbs dwelt more or less uneventfully for three centuries. They generally formed a loose confederacy under chiefs called zupans. They were commonly, in a loose fashion, loyal to the eastern empire mainly through fear of their dangerous neighbors, the Bulgarians. About 840 they united under a chief named Vlastimirs to repel the latter.

The country rose to great heights under Stephen Dushan, the czar of the Serbs, but after his death Murad I. conquered the country, and it was not until 1815 that the Serbs partially threw off the Turkish yoke.—Exchange.

PRECIOUS MUGS.

The Crucibles Used in the New York Assay Office.

In the government assay office on Wall street, New York, there is a corner that looks very much like a mug rack in a country barber shop, where every customer has his individual mug highly decorated in gilt letters.

On this rack are perhaps fifty crucibles for melting down gold. The crucibles are decorated with crude initials and numerals and are the property of the biggest gold mining corporations in North and South America.

The reason for the individual mugs is that the clay of crucibles takes up a considerable quantity of gold in the process of smelting which otherwise would be lost to the customer bringing the gold to the government to be refined. After two or three smeltings the clay is saturated and takes up no more gold. When it is finally succeeded by a new crucible it is returned to the customer to be broken up for its hidden gold.

Mugs that are used for melting down random lots of gold are carefully preserved by the government refiners and sold. Uncle Sam pockets the proceeds, as in these random lots there is no way of computing to what amount each of perhaps twenty customers may be entitled. It is only the smelting concern that sells the government enough gold at one time to monopolize a single melting that obtains the right to a mug on the rack.—New York Tribune.

This is because the carbonic acid gas, being heavier than the atmosphere, settles to the bottom of the valley. Dogs and fowls thrown into it fall senseless instantly and die in a few minutes. To Cheer Him.

The wife of his bosom was going to leave him for a fortnight, and Fitz-Tomkins was trying his very best to look sad.

"My dear," he said, choking back a chuckle with his handkerchief and wiping his eyes, "I hardly like to think how I shall miss you. The evenings will be so long and lonely without you, I shall have no one to talk to."

"George," said Mrs. Fitz, surveying him with a marble eye, "I have provided for your comfort in this as in every other way. When you return home you will find dear mother there. She will remain till I come back and keep you company in the evenings, George."

And as the train slowly glided out of the station the guard wondered why Fitz-Tomkins nearly bit him when he insinuated a tip.—London Telegraph.

Ireland's Coast Cliffs.

The finest cliff scenery in the United Kingdom is on the coast of the county of Donegal, at the northwest of Ireland, facing the Atlantic, where the variety and grandeur of the cliffs are most thrilling and impressive. Slieve League, south of Glen Columbkille, is a superb introduction to Donegal's coast splendors. In less than half a mile from the sea the mountain rears its height of nearly 2,000 feet. In the island of Achill, off the west coast of Ireland, the cliffs of Croghan, at Achill Head, rise sheer from the water's edge to the dizzy height of 3,000 feet.—London Standard.

Drafting the Waiter.

In a Parisian cafe an American ordered a hors d'oeuvre, sole, agneau pre sale, artichoke salad, peche Melba, and so on, and when the waiter brought him a bill of 30 francs he paid it like a man. After his change was brought he counted it and pushed a franc toward the waiter for a tip. But the man, pushing back the franc, said in gentle reproach:

"Pardon, monsieur, but that is the counterfeit franc."

He Didn't Know Exactly What to Do, So They Came to His Rescue.

A young author and critic, who has come to be an authority upon a certain modern phase of education, went a few days ago to deliver his first lecture at a girls' school. He had lectured before, but never at a young ladies' seminary, and as two white frocked, curly haired ushers led him out to the platform and he sat down beside the matronly principal among the women who made up the faculty and faced a sea of girls' faces he was young enough to feel a bit of embarrassment himself. It was rather difficult at first, but once the lecture was started things went all right.

He finished what he had to say and sat down. The audience and the matronly principal and the women who made up the faculty clapped their hands enthusiastically. Then the applause died down and silence settled upon the lecture hall. The young man sat on waiting for some one to say something, dimly conscious that a move of one kind or another was expected of him. But his lecture was finished. He had said all he had to say. There were no questions from faculty or students. A few of the girls began to fidget, but no one spoke.

The young man became unpleasantly aware that he was expected to do something and to do it at once, but he did not know what to do. He reflected miserably that he did not know the etiquette of a girls' school anyhow. And then there was a signal from the principal and a move in the audience, and the prettier of the two girl ushers approached him, a little embarrassed, a little shy, determined to do her duty. "I'm so sorry, Mr. B.," she murmured, "but I'm afraid you'll have to—you'll have to start right this minute if you want to make your train!"—New York Times.

Took Wind Out of Their Sails.

Addressing one of his southern audiences, Sam Jones once requested all the husbands present who had not spoken a harsh word to their wives for a month to stand up. He shook hands with those who arose and then introduced them to the rest of the audience as the "twenty-seven biggest liars in Tennessee."

Ice Cream and a Nerve.

Why do we sometimes get an ache in the nose when eating ice cream. There is a nerve running along the back of the nose which doctors call the anterior palatine nerve. This has a branch running along the base of the nasal cavity and another branch running along the palate. The ends of these branches join through finer branches which run through openings in the palate near the front teeth. When we get some ice cream in the mouth and keep it in front for a moment so that the irritation produced by the cold reaches the fine connecting branches the sensation may be carried to the branch in the nose. Irritation of this branch produces the sensation of pain. We get the same sensation when breathing very cold air.—New York American.

Meredith and Words.

George Meredith, according to the London Chronicle, "employs that abominable contraction 'alright.' It can't be a printer's error, for it occurs more than once. And he uses it as early as 1863, so that the abusers of our language may now claim Meredith of all men as their prophet. This is one of those things that baffle explanation, particularly from a writer whose use of words was meticulous and who always refused to delete the first 'e' in 'judgment,' always spelling it 'judgement' in his novels. Some of us, however, will fight 'alright' to the bitter end."

MEREDITH AS A CHILD.

When Only Two Years of Age He Had an Air of Superiority.

As is generally the case with an only child, brought up entirely in the society of his elders, George Meredith developed early and always had something of contempt for juveniles of his own age. He was a reserved and acutely sensitive boy, afraid of ghosts and being left alone in the dark, and was perhaps a trifle spoiled by his mother, a refined woman, whose love and care he lost before he reached his sixth birthday. There is still living a gentleman who well remembers George Meredith at the age of two years. This was about 1830-1, and Mr. James Price relates of his visit:

"I went up to the large front drawing room, where I found the boy and a lady who must have been his mother. The boy did not seem to care much about playing with me, and I was rather shy. He brought me his toys and picture books to see, and I was mightily pleased, I remember, with a horse and cart (not like the many cheap ones that I had seen), a beautiful, lifelike white horse, and the cart of superior make, and as George drew it along it made music as the wheels went round. What I remember of the child's appearance is somewhat hazy—a boy in white frock and blue ribbons tied up his sleeves, but he was certainly a pretty child. I spent the afternoon with him, but we did not get on much together, as he assumed a sort of superiority."—Fortnightly Review.

He was so much occupied day that he scarcely gave it thought, but on his way he remembered it and wondered would do with a child in. However, he could tell not the matter till he had seen. On entering his living room surprised to see a young woman for dinner sitting there did not occur to him the Alice Wilkins. But who The young lady rose—she met him. She seemed he what taken aback at his appearance. "I'm waiting for Mr. W. remarked.

"Beg pardon. Will you tell me you are?"

"I'm Mr. Wilkins' ward."

"You? Mr. Wilkins' ward Wilkins."

"Dear me! I expected to see the age of my father."

"Your father was just my Papa was forty. You much over thirty."

During this brief dialog pleasurable sensation was in the bosom of Mr. Wilkins the same time he was perplexed of the mistake.

"Well," he said, after a grasp of the hand, "you're here you will have to stay settle what you're to do. I Mrs. Hawkins will make a chaperon and will take care admirably. Has she made comfortable?"

"She has."

"I'll be ready for dinner minutes."

It seemed that evening Wilkins that his dining room different from ever before. The dinner table, the flowers on the table, the sweetener. Wilkins took up of his ward's future, but progress in settling it. As time, her father had left him and she must either marry her own living.

REASON FOR EXODUS.

Farmer Should Treat His Boy as Well as the Hired Man.

It is all very well for Senator Camp- bell, in Parliament to lament the exodus of our young men from the drudgery of farm life to the so-called gentlemanly occupation of the city, and to advocate that the Government should do more to make farming life so attractive to the sons of our agri- culturists that they will, in choosing a life occupation, decide to remain on the homestead. The greatest hind- rance to keeping young men on farms rests more with their fathers than with any paternal Government. At home, when the lad is spending part of his time at school, it is a pleasant relaxation to him to fill up his spare hours doing chores, and looking after the horses and stock in a boyish fashion; but when the time arrives for him to leave school altogether, and he takes a regular place on the farm as a helper, after the first gloss of novelty has worn off, farm life loses its fascination, and he yearns for some employment that will not only be less laborious, but more re-

BRAILE'S BIG WELL.

It Would Have Worked Wonders Only It Was Never Dug.

Perhaps the most idiotic of all the many idiotic schemes with which Brit- ous have been enamored in days gone by was that which was known at the time as Braille's big well. M. Braille was a Belgian engineer, residing tem- porarily in England, who, in 1848, ap- proached the then prime minister (Lord John Russell) with a scheme for sinking a huge shaft, a mile in diameter and twenty miles in depth, that should tap the earth's internal heat and there- by render England independent of her coal supply when this gave out.

Lord Russell, always rather attract- ed by visionary projects, attentively considered the scheme and caused plans and estimates to be drawn up. The first difficulty was the inrush of water, which would have been certain to occur sooner or later. This it was proposed to keep under by pumping calissons being used for the purpose of further excavation, while the finished portion of the shaft was to be rendered watertight by a "jacket" of granite set in Portland cement.

Mad as the scheme was, it found plenty of advocates, and a provisional bill had been, it was said, actually drafted, when the overthrow of the government on the franchise question was announced, and the whole busi- ness was thenceforth consigned to a well merited oblivion.—Pearson's Weekly.

BREAKING IT GENTLY.

The Naval Court Was Polite With the Pushing Boston Attorney.

Courts martial are not infrequently held on battleships in the Charlestown navy yard. Sometimes a sailor will send for a Boston attorney to defend him, although this tendency is discour- aged by the officers. Most attorneys know they have no absolute right to practice in a naval court and can do so only by permission of the court, but occasionally a lawyer goes aboard who does not realize this fact.

A sailor who was charged with gam- bling had retained an attorney to get him off. This attorney, who had never had such a case before, went briskly into the officers' wardrobe, where the court was sitting and without waiting on ceremony began to address the court in a blustering manner.

"Just a minute," interrupted the pre- siding officer. "Who are you?"

"I am Mr. Rudolph Smithers," the at- torney replied, "and I am a member of the Massachusetts bar."

"Oh, you are Mr. Smithers, are you?" continued the officer. "Then you ar- gue the man whom the orderly wants to see." He called the orderly.

"What does the orderly want of me?" asked the attorney in a superior tone.

"Nothing very much," replied the chief justice. "He merely wants to show you off the ship."—New York Herald.

The Womanly Touch.

he scarcely gave the matter a thought, but on his way home he realized it and wondered what he had with a child in the house. He could tell nothing about her till he had seen his ward, in his living room he was to see a young woman dresser sitting there writing. It occurred to him that she was Wilkins. But who was she? The lady rose—she was apparently nineteen—and advanced to him. She seemed herself somewhat aback at his appearance. "Waiting for Mr. Wilkins," she said.

London. Will you tell me—what is Mr. Wilkins' ward?"

Mr. Wilkins' ward! I am Mrs. Wilkins' ward."

"I expected to meet a person of my father's age," she said. "I was just my age." "You were forty. You don't look thirty."

This brief dialogue a very pleasant sensation was welling up in the bosom of Mr. Wilkins, and at that time he was perplexed at the mistake.

He said, after a welcome to the hand, "you're here, and will have to stay till we can get you're to do. Fortunately, Wilkins will make a very good and will take care of you."

Has she made you comfortable?"

ready for dinner in a few minutes."

That evening to Mr. Wilkins his dining room looked different from ever before. The lights brighter, the dinner tasted better, the flowers on the table smelled sweeter. Wilkins took up the subject of his future, but made no headway in settling it. As to her father had left her nothing. Must either marry or make a living.

After the two adjourned to the study and continued to seek for a solution of the problem. About 11 o'clock Wilkins said:

"Are ten or fifteen years young enough to find a way out, a very delay—to me?"

Wilkins made no verbal reply, but cast her eyes down to the floor. Mr. Wilkins maintained a silence. Both were thinking.

"I might make your home here," she said. "Still the girl made a mistake."

"But you would have to wait."

Mo' than twenty times in them three hours that critter had me almost dun fur, but I'd send up a sort of prayer and git a new hold, and at last I fetched him. When he was able to talk he riz up and took my hand and sez:

"Stranger, it was a far wrastle, and I've been flopped. I wouldn't 'a believed yo' could hev dun it, but yo' did, and I'm sayin' yo' ar' a purty good man. Howsumever, it ain't over yet. Yo've got to lick me to git Sue, and I know yo kin never do it. We'll take three days to rest up, and then yo' kin cum back and tackle me."

"And did you go?" I asked as the old man made a long pause.

"Fur suah," he replied. "I was mighty sore and lame, but I knowed he would be as bad off. Besides, that gal Sue had hooted fur me when I flopped her pop, and I knowed by that she was with me and would hope fur me to come out on top. In three days I went back to hev it out. The critter was a-lookin' fur me and glad to see me."

"How's it to be?" sez I.

"A far fout," sez he, "no throwin' rocks nor hittin' with clubs. Whoop! Jock-a-doodle-do!"

"Waal, we went at it. Sue and her maw was out thar as befo', and the gal gin me a smile as I went in. It was a rough and tumble fout. Thar wasn't no mistake about it, bekase he riz up and sez to me:

"Zeb White, I'm a whopped man, and that gal is yo's. I didn't believe thar was a critter on these mountings as could make me hoot, but yo' dun it. And now when do yo' want the gal?"

"Right now, I reckon," sez I.

"Ain't it purty sudden?"

"Not so very, bein' as she's ready to go."

"Then, maw, bring out the broomstick and let 'em jump over it, and if they want to be married by a preacher they kin do it sum other time."

"And you took the girl home?" I asked.

"Sartinly," replied Zeb. "Yes, sah, took her right home with me, with her feather bed on my back, and she's out thar in the kitchen makin' mince pies this minit. As I was sayin', these yere marriages of today don't amount to shucks. When yo' hev a gal and hev to lick her ole pop to git her then yo' know she's with the gittin'."

Careful With Their Lemons.

"In English Inns," said a man who had just returned from a long coaching trip in England, "they do not use lemons in our haphazard fashion. They make the use of one more or less of a solemn rite. I remember asking for a 'horse's neck' in a little inn in the north country. The landlord had never heard of the drink, and I explained to him that it was ginger ale with a lemon peel in it. He went back to the bar and returned presently with an empty tray. 'I'm very sorry, sir,' he said, 'but we haven't got a lemon open just now.'"—New York Tribune.

and he takes a regular place on the farm as a helper, after the first gloss of novelty has worn off, farm life loses its fascination, and he yearns for some employment that will not only be less laborious, but more remunerative, to himself. He sees the hired man receiving wages, and working only a limited number of hours per day; but he sees himself, save in very exceptional cases, the recipient of a miserable allowance of pocket money, doled out, often unwillingly, at uncertain times, compelled to do all the drudgery which the hired man neglects or refuses to perform. His working hours have no limit, and his recreational periods are spoiled for him, because he is too tired to participate in any enjoyment after he is through with his own work, and has cleared up the arrears left by others. At length he gets disgusted with his lot, throws it up, goes to the city, gets a situation, and adds another to the long array of farm deserters. The remedy must be provided in the home; the son must be put on no lower plane than the hired help; he must be encouraged to like his work; and, so far as possible, the charms of his childhood aspirations must be made a continuous living feature of his every-day life. Then, but not until then, the exodus from the land will be no longer accepted as a necessary evil.—Calgary News-Telegram.

Polished and Vigorous.

Observing a passenger with the unlighted butt of a cigar in his fingers, the street car conductor requested him to put it out.

"It is out, you chump," responded the passenger.

"Pardon me," resumed the conductor, "if I have failed to make myself clear. The condition to which I had reference was not one of mere temporary non-combustion, but of elimination, the eradication, I might say, of the physical presence of your nicotine laden remnant, this process followed necessarily by cessation of the odor now permeating an atmosphere already somewhat deficient, I fear, in the essential element of ozone. I'm a humble conductor, and my aim is to please; but, you big porcine stiff, you throw that cigar through the door or I'll throw you and it both. See?"

"Excuse me, professor," replied the passenger meekly, and the incident was closed.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Running as Exercise.

The fact that a person is capable of doing the best running and speed walking before the thirtieth year need not lead those who have passed the third decade to think that they are on the down grade of life, says an authority. These exercises call for elasticity of the arteries, and that lessens soon after the thirtieth year, but powers of endurance increase in the well preserved man or woman up to fifty or fifty-five or even later. Soldiers of fifty are like leather and can perform feats of endurance that would kill the stripling, and the same is true of women.

Sinister.

A nonconformist clergyman in Manchester is chuckling over a letter he recently received from the vicar of a certain parish church. He had written to the vicar asking for permission to conduct a funeral in the churchyard.

"He immediately sent me a most courteous note," the nonconformist clergyman said, "but I could not help noticing that it would be possible to give to his words a sinister meaning. The note ran: 'You will, both tomorrow and at any other time, be most welcome in our churchyard.'"—London Answers.

SMUGGLING — THE INTERNATIONAL PASTIME.

It is, of course, true that all smuggling is wrong, as well as illegal, but it is a breeder of good stories of adventure and keen wits. Robson Black, in February Canada Monthly, tell some of these latter, among them being the tale of outwitted customs officer at Father Point.

When an enterprising citizen takes out his papers as a smuggler, it is often from the lure of a contest of wits as much as the incentive to make money illegitimately. A few years ago one of the ablest sea-captains on the Atlantic Coast, the son of a daring smuggler of the older and more piratical days, gave notice to his company and disappeared for many years. As master of a smuggling ship he turned up once more in the neighborhood of Father point in the St. Lawrence River, and a Government cutter was sent to watch his movements. On a Wednesday morning while the cutter lay at the wharf of the isolated wind-swept hamlet the captain was called ashore to receive an important telephone message from an alleged French-Canadian farmer some miles to the east.

"There's a smuggling ship just off the farm," said an excited voice, "and the crew is busy unloading the goods."

Assuring him of the handsome reward, the captain hurried back to his vessel, got up steam and bore off to the east at full speed. Meantime the smuggler, who had himself been speaking to the captain from a point many miles west of Father Point, steamed down the river to the Government dock and while the revenue ship grew smaller and smaller in the eastern sky he impudently unloaded his illicit cargo on the King's property where French-Canadian agents carted in inland during the whole of an afternoon. When the angry commander returned from the east at night fall, Master Smuggler was again far on his way to Boston for another cargo and not a trace of the untaxed goods could be seen.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE DELUGE

Deluge Philosophically Attested by History and Geology.

Pastor Russell Defends Biblical Account—Jesus and the Apostles, History and Science, Support Genesis Record—Higher Critics Held Responsible For Approaching Anarchy

Brooklyn, Feb. 2.—Pastor Russell to-day addressed the Brooklyn Congregation now generally known as "The Bible Students." His text was, "As it was in the days of Noah, so also shall it be in the days of the Son of Man."—Luke 17:26.

The address opened with a scathing arraignment of Higher Critics. Our richly endowed colleges, he declared, are undermining faith in the Bible, which means faith in a personal God, and substituting a scant recognition of the laws of Nature, devoid of sympathy or mercy. Practically every minister graduated during the last twelve years has been a believer in human evolution. Disbelief in the Bible account of man's creation in God's image, means disbelief in a fall from that image, disbelief in the need of redemption and reconciliation, and disbelief in the necessity for the Restitution to be accomplished by Messiah's Kingdom.

Pastor Russell said that he does not question the sincerity of Higher Critics. His own experiences along the same line forty years ago give him great sympathy for them. He insisted, however, that it is not honorable for those who have abandoned the creeds to pose before the public as supporters of those creeds, and to draw salaries and receive honorary titles for undermining the faith of the people, while posing as representatives of Christ and the Bible. He declared such a course dishonest and dishonorable.

The Deluge Corroborated by History.

The speaker held that Higher Critics approach every Bible topic from the standpoint of unbelief, and declared that if they would reverse their position and seek for corroborations of the Bible, their success would be better. These critics, exploring the ruins of Babylon, found clay tablets rudely picturing the ark and containing a few words about a general deluge. Instead of saying that this confirms the Bible thought, they declare that the Israelites in Babylon drew their story of the Deluge from Babylonian legends. How silly to suppose that the beautiful Genesis account came from a few words recorded by Babylonians!

Pastor Russell promised that next Sunday he would take up the moral reasons justifying the destruction of humanity with the Deluge. Through his sermons, printed weekly in hundreds of newspapers, those desiring might continue with him the study of the subject. To-day he wished to

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 3.—There was a good enquiry from foreign buyers for wheat, but, as prices bid were unchanged to 3d lower, only a few odd loads were sold. The export trade in oats and barley was quiet. It is estimated that sales of 3,000,000 bushels of wheat, 500,000 bushels of oats and 400,000 bushels of barley were made for export here during the month of January. The local trade in coarse grains continues quiet. A weaker feeling has developed in the market for winter wheat flour, and prices have declined 10c per barrel, owing to the increased offerings and the somewhat limited demand. Spring wheat flour is steady under a fair demand. Millfeed quiet. Butter and cheese quiet. Eggs steady. Dressed hogs strong at an advance of 50c.

himselves with the Deluge. Through his sermons, printed weekly in hundreds of newspapers, those desiring might continue with him the study of the subject. To-day he wished to show that natural causes fully confirm the words of Jesus, the Apostles and Moses respecting the Deluge.

The great difficulty heretofore has been to harmonize the story of the Deluge with the shape of the earth.
This has now been met. The Vailian theory respecting creation shows that when the earth was in a molten state,
it threw off minerals in the form of gases, which on cooling, separated
more or less, according to density,
and must have constituted great rings
or bands about the earth, similar to those of Saturn and Jupiter.

As the earth cooled, these rings acquired separate motions, because of their distance, but gravitated slowly toward the earth, the atmosphere preventing immediate precipitation.
Gradually each would spread out as a great canopy, gravitating toward
the poles, because of centrifugal force. Finally the accumulation at the poles would overcome the resistance of the atmosphere, and cause precipitation.

Many such deluges occurred before
man was created, and from these came mineral deposits. The last of these rings consisted of pure water,
and spread out as a canopy when man was created. It refracted the sun's rays much as would the roof of a hothouse, and rendered uniform the temperature of earth.

Frozen in Solid Ice.

Recently, in Siberia, a mammoth was found with grass between its teeth, frozen solid in thick ice. Similarly, a deer was found in polar regions with undigested grass in its stomach. Evidently the catastrophe which produced these results was sudden—such as would occur according to the Vailian theory, said the Pastor.

The breaking of the canopy sent a great flood of water suddenly from the poles to the equator. Then came the glacial period, when icebergs
floating down from polar regions cut deep valleys, etc.

As the cold at the poles was extreme, so was the heat at the equator.
Ocean currents soon set in, which have gradually modified the Arctic regions and brought the polar ice as great icebergs toward the equator.

The Ark Divinely Protected.

We naturally inquire, Where was the ark? How was it kept safe? Faith answers that God undoubtedly protected it. But now Prof. Wright tells us that the region about Ararat contains unusually deep alluvial deposits, as if it had been a settling basin
for the muddy waters of long ago.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Feb. 3.—At the Montreal
Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ended
Feb. 1 were 1300 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 2350 hogs and 300 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 1100 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 225 calves.

A feature of the trade was the stronger feeling in the market for good to choice steers, owing to the limited supply offered, and prices as compared with a week ago were fully 25c per 100 pounds higher, but the offerings of the lower grades were ample to fill all requirements and prices were unchanged. The demand from packers was good for carload lots, and choice steers, weighing 1150 pounds, sold at $6.55, and some heavier loads at $6.75, while good loads of mixed steers, weighing 900 pounds,
brought $6.30, and fairly good mixed loads $5.50 to $5.80 per 100 pounds. A few picked lots of extra choice steers were sold; butchers at $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.

Choice butcher cows were sold as high
as $6 for carloads, but the top prices
paid ranged from $5.50 to $5.75 per 100 pounds. The demand for bulls was slow and prices showed no change.

The trade in sheep and lambs was quiet
owing to the very small supplies coming forward. The tone of the market was firm, with a fair demand from butchers
for small lots, and sales of lambs were made at from $7.25 to $7.50, and ewes at $5 to $5.25 per 100 pounds. The demand for calves was fair at steady prices.

A much stronger feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and prices have advanced 50c to 65c per 100 pounds, owing to the higher prices ruling in the Toronto
market and the increased demand for supplies on spot, consequently the market was active, with sales of selected lots
at $9.40 to $9.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7.25;
do., medium, $5.50 to $6.50; do., common-$4 to $5; canners, $2.75 to $3; butchers'
cattle, choice cows, $5.50 to $5.75; do., medium, $4 to $4.50; do., bulls, $3.50 to $5.25; milkers, choice, each, $70 to $75;
do., common and medium, each, $60 to $65; springers, $50 to $55.

Sheep, ewes, $5 to $5.25; bucks and
culls, $4.50 to $4.75; lambs, $7.25 to $7.50.
Hogs, f.a.b., $9.40 to $9.50.

Calves, $3 to $12.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—Cattle—Receipts, 19,500; market steady. Beefes, $6.35 to $9; Texas steers, $4.90 to $5.75; stockers and feeders, $4.75 to $7.50; cows and heifers, $3 to $7.50; calves, $8.50 to $10.

Hogs—Receipts, 44,000; market mostly 5c higher; light, $7.45 to $7.75; mixed,
$7.45 to $7.72½; heavy, $7.30 to $7.72½;
rough, $7.30 to $7.45; pigs, $6.25 to $7.50;
bulk of sales, $7.60 to $7.70.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 25,000;
market steady to strong; native, $4.60 to $5.90; yearlings, $6.35 to $7.75. Lambs, native, $6.60 to $8.75.

LIVERPOOL LIVE STOCK.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 3.—John Rogers &
Co. cable that trade at Birkenhead today showed no variation on Saturdays, and prices remain at 13½c to 15c per pound
for Irish steers.

Kitchen Helps.

Things to be fried often stick to the pan if it is new. To prevent this scour the pan thoroughly with salt, rinse well
and then dry.

It is a good plan to keep the oven door open part of the time when not in use, so that all traces of gas or odors
of food may escape.

To keep white enamel ware from dis-
coloring make a strong solution of baking soda and rainwater and put the utensils in it and boil them hard. They will be as white as new.

Boileau.

"Nothing," said La Fontaine, "is more contrary to good sense. What! The pit is supposed to understand that which an actor is not expected to hear, although he is close behind the one who is speaking? Absurd!"

As he grew very warm while thus expressing his feelings, and as it was impossible to make him hear a word Boileau tried to arrest his attention by repeating over and over again in loud tones, "La Fontaine must be a pretty rascal, a great rogue." But La Fontaine took no notice of all this abuse. At last they all burst out laughing, and this interrupted his train of thought.

"What are you laughing at?" he said. Boileau replied gravely: "Fancy! I was abusing you at the top of my voice and you never heard me, although I am near enough to touch you, and you are astonished that an actor does not hear an aside that another actor utters on the boards."

The Two Coats Were There.

Sometimes the more you get a negro cornered the less cornered you have him. This fact, long known to many, was discovered the other day by a leather man in the "swamp."

This man suddenly awoke to the fact that certain back walls were dingy with dirt and decided they'd look much better if whitewashed.

So he summoned his old negro factotum and told him to get busy with his whitewash brush, giving special directions to put two coats on.

When the job apparently had been finished the leather merchant inspected it and found the whitewash suspiciously thin looking.

Summoning Sambo, he said as sternly as he could, "You didn't go over those walls twice as I told you to."

"No, sir," was the quick reply. "I ain't gone over twice, but I done put two coats in de pail, sir—two coats in de pail!"—New York Mail.

Weren't you indignant when people you didn't know called you by your first name?"

"No," replied Senator Sorghum, "but I've worried a great deal since they've shown a disposition to stop it."—Washington Star.

PLUTOCRAT SPANKED.

Maid Chastizes Multi-millionaire Baby and Disappears.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 4.—Palm Beach went into history yesterday as the place where Vinson McLean, the $100,000,000 baby, got his first spanking.

According to the story circulated the three-year-old son of Edward B. McLean of Washington, received a brief but thorough, barehanded castigation from Mrs. McLean's personal maid, who, to avoid the expected wrath to come, immediately packed her things and left for parts unknown.

What makes it particularly humiliating for young McLean is the fact that he is to be "a man's boy," his father has said, and for that reason only men nurses and detective guards were presumed to touch him.

I. O. D. E.

In response to an invitation from The U. E. Loyalist Chapter I. O. D. E. Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, accompanied by Mr. W. J. Paul, M. P., Mr. B. Hepburn, M. P., Major Alexander Deroche, Mr. Ed. Grange and Miss Helen Grange, arrived at Napanee in the Minister's private car on the 4.10 p.m. train on Friday Jan 31st. A large number of townspeople, including the Mayor and the Town and County Councillors, welcomed him at the station. He was driven at once to inspect the available properties suitable as a site for the proposed drill-hall, and then to the Town Hall, where he was presented with an address, and promised the citizens assembled there that a drill hall would be granted to the town. He was favorably impressed with the west side of the market square where a drill-hall costing about $50,000 will probably be erected.

Col. Hughes with Mr. Paul and Mr. Hepburn then drove up to "Hillcrest", where a reception was given to the members of the U. E. L. Chapter, by their regent Mrs. Harshaw, to meet their distinguished guest. After dining at "Hillcrest" Col. Hughes gave a patriotic address at Trinity Church, under the auspices of the I. O. D. E. The regent, Mrs. Harshaw who presided, Mr. Paul, and Mr. Hepburn, the Executive and convenors of the entertainme t a d decoration committees, accompanied Col. Hughes to the platform, while the other members of the chapter occupied the choir seats. The Misses Nesbitt and Caroline Mills opened the programme with an instrumental duet. Mrs. Howard followed with "O Canada," which suited her rich, full voice to perfection. The Minister of Militia and Defence, who was most cordially received, then addressed the audience, giving voice to his ideals, of Imperial Unity when representatives from each part of the Empire would form an united Imperial Parliament, at which they could discuss and decide all matters affecting the welfare of the Empire as a whole; insuring peace for the nation by being thoroughly prepared for war; making the military camps throughout the country wholesome, sober and attractive, so the best youth of the Dominion would answer to the call for recruits and mothers feel assured that their boys were as safe from any

THE THIBETAN TEA.

It Forms an Almost Indispensable Part of His Daily Fare.

Father Huc, the missionary and explorer of Thibet a century or more ago, depicts in his delightful book "avalanches" of laden yaks pouring down the mountain sides. The early critics of this book pronounced this very amusing, but to be taken merely as a picturesque relief to what the worthy priest feared would be a dull narrative. Nevertheless, it is now known to be quite true. Yaks still make the glissade on the icy passes when carrying tea over the mountains from China to the interior of Thibet. The Thibetan must have his tea. It is his mainstay—his life. The nomads of these lofty plains have absolutely no crops. They have no pigs nor fowls. Their herds of yaks and their flocks of goats and sheep furnish them with meat, which they eat fairly often, and with milk, cream, and especially butter, which they consume in astonishing quantities. The national dish, indeed, is a sort of gruel made by boiling parched barley meal and mixing into it as it cooks a goodly proportion of buttered tea.

All the tea and most of the barley used in Thibet comes from China, and nearly all by a single road which leads across the rough mountains of Sze-Chuan. It is the "best road in western China because most traveled and cared for; yet on the mountain passes—one ten thousand feet high—the tea-carriers in winter must wear climbing-irons, and pack horses descend mostly by falling on the glairy trail and rolling and gliding, load and all, until they bring up gently in loose snow and bushes at the bottom. The Thibetan yaks know better. They sit down on their haunches, as Huc tells us, and skilfully slide.

This precarious road is traversed by an endless stream of porters carrying bales of tea west and bales of skins, etc., eastward—bales which frequently weigh three hundred pounds. They form a guild very jealous of their caste, and will not allow any horses to be bred or used on the fertile plain of the Min River, near the border, for fear of encroachment on their monopoly—a trade-union centuries old. In addition to the usual traffic via Tatsien-lu, a great caravan of tea goes twice a year from Song-pang to cross Thibet as far as the great lake Kokonor. All the nomads know of its coming, and at each halting place families assemble from far and near to buy a half-year's supply of tea in exchange for goatskins, yak hair, etc. These traveling merchants (Chinese) are in no danger from the tribes through which they regularly

a whole ; insuring peace for the nation
 by being thoroughly prepared for war;
 making the military camps throughout the country wholesome, sober and attractive, so the best youth of the Dominion would answer to the call for recruits and mothers feel assured that their boys were as safe from any evil influences as in their own homes ;
 the erection of drill halls where the youths of Canada could be made self controlled, patriotic, healthy and decent through proper military and physical training, and where, instead
 of gadding about the streets at night,
 they could spend their evenings in innocent, wholesome recreation, properly supervised and controlled. Col.
 Hughes observed that the day was the anniversary of Lord Durham's report to the Colonial Office on responsible government in Canada. He declared that the cadet movement in Canada
 was one of the most potent agencies
 for good that any government could devise ; it meant controlled recreation for youths of the Country and the inculcation of habits of discipline, manliness, physical, moral and mental strength. Since he had assumed Office six American Generals had come to consult him regarding the progress made in the cadet movement in Canada. He asked the ladies' patriotic associations throughout the Dominion
 to co-operate actively with him in improving the tone and morals of militia camps. Liquor is now barred, and healthy amusements and entertainments should take its place.

Mr. W. J. Paul followed with a short but interesting address, and after a few remarks from Mr. Hepburn, Mr.
 Percy Nesbit sang "For Christ and The King," his fine tenor voice filling the church, and giving great pleasure to his hearers. Mrs. Howard's rendering of "Rule Britannia" so enthused
 Col. Hughes, that he rose and asked the audience to join in the chorus.
 After another patriotic song by Mr.
 Nesbit and a hearty vote of thanks to the Minister and all taking part in the programme, the proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The proceeds of the entertainment
 go to the Sir Oliver Mowat Memorial Tubercular fund. Several members of U. E. Loyalist Chapter attended the opening of the hospital Dec. 12th and were so pleased with the situation and appointments of the institution and in sympathy with its good work that the chapter has undertaken to furnish and maintain a ward there. The thanks of the U. E. L. Chapter are extended to Col. The Hon. Sam Hughes and all those who contributed in any way to the success of the evening.

The Japanese Language.

The Japanese language has some features which puzzle beginners in its use. In English when one has learned the name for rice that ends it. Not so in Japan. Begin with cooked rice, meshi. When eaten by a child it is called mama. In speaking to another person of eating rice you call it go-
 zen. As a merchant sells it, uncooked, it is kome, and as it grows in the field it is ine. So a carpenter's foot, or shaku, is about twelve inches, but a tailor's is fifteen. A kin or pound of beef is fourteen ounces, of flour twenty-one, of sugar over thirty. The ri, or mile, varies in different provinces, and on the Fusiyama ascent half a ri is made a ri because it's so much harder work going uphill.

 cles all her life," she explained.

 are you willing to be separated from her
 that long?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Historical.

"Children," asked the visitor who was addressing the school, "how many

 Nobody answered. "Think a moment.
 'Little'?"— Still nobody spoke up.

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Filigree Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBB5-MERRILL COMPANY.

"Considering the short time we have had (it was only yesterday that Jones found his way into this office), we have unearthed some very interesting facts in his regard. His devotion to Mr. Fairbrother was never any secret, and we knew as much about that the day after the murder as we do now. But the feelings with which he regarded Mrs. Fairbrother—well, that is another thing—and it was not till last night we heard that the attachment which bound him to her was of the sort which takes no account of youth or age, fitness or unfitness. He was no Adonis, and old enough, we are told, to be her father; but for all that we have found several persons who can tell strange stories of the persistence with which his eager old eyes would follow her whenever chance threw them together during the time she remained under her husband's roof, and others who relate, with even more avidity, how, after her removal to apartments of her own, he used to spend hours in the adjoining park just to catch a glimpse of her figure as she crossed the sidewalk on her way to and from her carriage. Indeed, his senseless, almost senile passion for this magnificent beauty became a byword in some mouths, and it only escaped being mentioned at the inquest from respect to Mr. Fairbrother, who had never recognized this weakness in his steward, and from its lack of visible connection with her horrible death and the stealing of her great jewel. Nevertheless, we have a witness now—it is astonishing how many witnesses we can scare up by a little effort, who never thought of coming forward themselves—who can swear to having seen him one night shaking his fist at her retreating figure as she stepped haughtily by him into her apartment house. This witness is sure that the man he saw thus gesticulating was Sears, and he is sure the woman was Mrs. Fairbrother. The only thing he is not sure of is how his own wife will feel when she hears that he was in that particular neighborhood on that particular evening, when he was evidently supposed to be somewhere else." And the inspector laughed.

"Is the steward's disposition a bad one," I asked, "that this display of feeling should impress you so much?"

"I don't know what to say about that yet. Opinions differ on this point. His friends speak of him as the mildest kind of a man, who without native executive skill could not manage the great household he has in charge. His enemies—and we have unearthed a few—say, on the contrary, that they have never had any confidence in his quiet ways; that these were not in keeping with the fact of his having been a California miner in the early fifties.

"You can see I am putting you very point."

"What point is that, Inspector Dellzell?"

"Whether he answered the following description." And, taking up another paper, he was about to read it aloud to me, when an interruption occurred. A man showed himself at the door whom the inspector no sooner recognized than he seemed to forget me in his eagerness to interrogate him. Perhaps the appearance of the latter had something to do with it. He looked as if he had been running or had been the victim of some extraordinary adventure. At all events, the inspector arose as he entered and was about to question him when he remembered me, and, casting about for some means of ridding himself of my presence without injury to my feelings, he suddenly pushed open the door of an adjoining room and requested me to step inside while he talked a moment with this man.

Of course I went, but I cast him an appealing look as I did so. It evidently had its effect, for his expression changed as his hand fell on the door-knob. Would he snap the lock tight, and so shut me out from what concerned me as much as it did any one in the whole world, or would he recognize my anxiety—the necessity I was under of knowing just the ground I was standing on—and let me hear what this man had to report?

I watched the door. It closed slowly, too slowly to latch. Would he catch it anew by the knob? No; he left it thus, and, while the crack was hardly perceptible, I felt confident that the least shake of the floor would widen it and give me the opportunity I sought. But I did not have to wait for this. The two men in the office I had just left began to speak and, to my unbounded relief, were sufficiently intelligible even now to warrant me in giving them my fullest attention.

After some expressions of astonishment on the part of the inspector as to the plight in which the other presented himself, the latter broke out:

"I've just escaped death! I'll tell you about that later. What I want to tell you now is that the man we want is in town. I saw him last night or his shadow, which is the same thing. It was in the house in Eighty-sixth street, the house they all think closed. He came in with a key and—"

"Wait! You have him?"

"No. It's a long story, sir!"

"Tell it!"

The tone was dry. The inspector was evidently disappointed.

"Don't blame me till you hear," said the other. "He is no common crook. This is how it was: You wanted the suspect's photograph and a specimen of his writing. I knew no better place to look for them than in his own room

come from the desk which had disappointed me, and was casting a look about the room, which was as bare as my hand of everything like ornament—I might almost say comfort—when I heard a noise which was not that of swishing rain or even gusty wind—these had not been absent from my ears for a moment. I didn't like that noise; it had a sneaky sound, and I shut my light off in a hurry. After that I crept hastily out of the room, for I don't like a setup in a trap.

"It was darker than ever now in the hall, or so it seemed, and as I backed away I came upon a jog in the wall behind which I crept. For the sound I had heard was no fancy. Some one else besides myself was in the house, and that some one was coming up the little turret stair, striking matches as he approached. Who could it be? A detective from the district attorney's office? I hardly thought so. He would have been provided with something better than matches to light his way. A burglar? No, not on the third floor of a house as rich as this. Some fellow on the force, then, who had seen me come in and, by some trick of his own, had managed to follow me? I would see. Meantime I kept my place behind the jog and watched, not knowing which way the intruder would go.

"Whoever he was, he was evidently astonished to see the turret door ajar, for he lit another match as he threw it open and, though I failed to get a glimpse of his figure, I succeeded in getting a very good one of his shadow. It was one to arouse a detective's instinct at once. I did not say to myself, this is the man I want, but I did say, this is nobody from headquarters, and I steadied myself for whatever might turn up.

"The first thing that happened was the sudden going out of the match which had made this shadow visible. The intruder did not light another. I heard him move across the floor with the rapid step of one who knows his way well, and the next minute a gas jet flared up in the steward's room, and I knew that the man the whole force was looking for had trapped himself.

"You will agree that it was not my duty to take him then and there without seeing what he was after. He was thought to be in the eastern states or south or west, and he was here. But why here? That is what I knew you would want to know, and it was just what I wanted to know myself. So I kept my place, which was good enough, and just listened, for I could not see.

"What was his errand? What did he want in this empty house at midnight? Papers first and then clothes. I heard him at his desk, I heard him in the closet and afterward pottering in the old trunk I had been so anxious to look into myself. He must have brought the key with him, for it was no time before I heard him throwing out the contents in a wild search for something he wanted in a great hurry.

He found it sooner than you would believe and began throwing the things back, when something happened. Expectedly or unexpectedly, his eye fell on some object which roused all his passions, and he broke into loud exclamations ending in groans. Finally he fell to kissing this object with a fervor suggesting rage and a rage suggesting tenderness carried to the point of ag-

make out none of the object and then ran against. I passed (I hardly know how I knew such), and in that mirror I saw the ghost of a ghost vanish. It was too much. I a suppressed oath and plucked, when I struck against door. If flew open again, and in, turning on my light in my desperation, when, instead of the sharp report of a pistol expected, I saw a second door before me, this time with a snap of a spring lock, that this was so, and that all was barred that way, I hurriedly back toward the door. I had entered the place, to that had fallen to simultaneous the other, a single spring both. I was trapped—a prisoner of the strangest sort of passageway, and as a speedy look about assured me a prisoner with hope of immediate escape, doors were not only immovable even locks to pick or break in, but the place was windows, and the only com which it could be said to have outside world at all was a shaft from the ceiling almost to the house. Whether this ventilator, or a means of light the hole when both doors were it was much too inaccessible any apparent way of escape.

"Never was a man more trapped in. As I realized I chance there was of any interference, how my captor, even was seen leaving the house to be on duty, would be taken self and so allowed to escape that I felt my position a hope. But anger is a powerful stimulant. I was mortally angry, not at Sears, but with myself. So was done, swearing I took around, and, finding that they getting through the walls, attention wholly to the shadow would certainly lead me to place if I could only find a mount it.

"And how do you think I do to this at last? A look dragged, lime covered cloth give you some idea. I cut it for myself up those perpendicular walls as the boy did up the natural bridge in Virginia you remember that old story reader? It came to me inspiration as I stood looking below, and, though I knew should have to work most of in perfect darkness, I decided man's life was worth some that I had rather fall and neck while doing something spend hours in maddening only to face death at last starvation.

"I had a knife, an exceedingly knife, in my pocket, and for few steps I should have the electric torch. The difficulty, the first difficulty—was to shaft from the floor where there was but one article of in the room, and that was between a table and a desk. and the desk was not high enough to reach the mount shaft. If I could turn it on might be some hope. But the look feasible. However, I was not and went at the shaft

—say, on the contrary, that they never had any confidence in his quiet ways; that these were not in keeping with the fact of his having been a California miner in the early fifties.

"You can see I am putting you very nearly where we are ourselves. Nor do I see why I should not add that this passion of the seemingly subdued but really hot-headed steward for a woman, who never showed him anything but what he might call an insulting indifference, struck us as a blow to be worked up, especially after we received this answer to a telegram we sent late last night to the nurse who is caring for Mr. Fairbrother in New Mexico."

He handed me a small yellow slip, and I read:

The steward left Mr. Fairbrother at El Moro. He has not heard from him since.
ANNETTA LA SERRA.
For Abner Fairbrother.

"At El Moro?" I cried. "Why, that was long enough ago!"

"For him to have reached New York before the murder. Exactly so, if he took advantage of every close connection."

CHAPTER XIV.

I CAUGHT my breath sharply. I did not say anything. I felt that I did not understand the inspector sufficiently yet to speak. He seemed to be pleased with my reticence. At all events, his manner grew even kinder as he said:

"This Sears is a witness we must have. He is being looked for now, high and low, and we hope to get some clew to his whereabouts before night—that is, if he is in this city. Meanwhile we are all glad—I am sure you are also—to spare so distinguished a gentleman as Mr. Grey the slightest annoyance."

"And Mr. Durand? What of him in this interim?"

"We will have to await developments. I see no other way, my dear."

It was kindly said, but my head drooped. This waiting was what was killing him and killing me. The inspector saw and gently patted my hand.

"Come," said he, "you have heard enough to see that it is never wise to force matters." Then, possibly with an intention of rousing me, he remarked: "There is another small fact which may interest you. It concerns the waiter, Wellgood, recommended, as you will remember, by this Sears. In my talk with Jones it leaked out as a matter of small moment, and so it was to him, that this Wellgood was the waiter who ran and picked up the diamond after it fell from Mr. Grey's hand."

"Ah!"

"This may mean nothing—it meant nothing to Jones—but I inform you of it because there is a question I want to put to you in this connection. You smile."

"Did I?" I meekly answered. "I do not know why."

This was not true. I had been waiting to see why the inspector had so honored me with all these disclosures, almost with his thoughts. Now I saw. He desired something in return.

"You were on the scene at this very moment," he proceeded, after a brief contemplation of my face, "and you must have seen this man when he lifted the jewel and handed it back to Mr. Grey. Did you remark his features?"

"No, sir; I was too far off. Besides, my eyes were on Mr. Grey."

"That is a pity. I was in hopes you could satisfy me on a very important

"Don't blame me till you hear, said the other. "He is no common crook. This is how it was: You wanted the suspect's photograph and a specimen of his writing. I knew no better place to look for them than in his own room in Mr. Fairbrother's house. I accordingly got the necessary warrant and late last evening undertook the job. I went alone—I was always an egotistical chap, more's the pity—and with no further precaution than a passing explanation to the officer I met at the corner I hastened up the block to the rear entrance on Eighty-seventh street. There are three doors to the Fairbrother house, as you probably know, two on Eighty-sixth street (the large front one and a small one connecting directly with the turret stairs) and one on Eighty-seventh street. It was to the latter I had a key. I do not think any one saw me go in. It was raining, and such people as went by were more concerned in keeping their umbrellas properly over their heads than in watching men skulking about in doorways.

"I got in, then, all right, and, being careful to close the door behind me, went up the first short flight of steps to what I knew must be the main hall. I had been given a plan of the interior, and I had studied it more or less before starting out, but I knew that I should get lost if I did not keep to the rear staircase, at the top of which I expected to find the steward's room. There was a faint light in the house, in spite of its closed shutters and tightly drawn shades, and having a certain dread of using my torch, knowing my weakness for pretty things and how hard it would be for me to pass so many fine rooms without looking in, I made my way up stairs, with no other guide than the handrail. When I had reached what I took to be the third floor, I stopped. Finding it very dark, I first listened—a natural instinct with us—then I lit up and looked about me.

"I was in a large hall, empty, as a vault and almost as desolate. Blank doors met my eyes in all directions, with here and there an open passage-way. I felt myself in a maze. I had no idea which was the door I sought, and it is not pleasant to turn unaccustomed knobs in a shut-up house at midnight, with the rain pouring in torrents and the wind making pandemonium in a half dozen great chimneys.

"But it had to be done, and I went at it in regular order till I came to a little narrow one opening on the turret stair. This gave me my bearings. Sears' room adjoined the staircase. There was no difficulty in spotting the exact door now and, merely stopping to close the opening I had made to this little staircase, I crossed to this door and flung it open. I had been right in my calculations. It was the steward's room, and I made at once for the desk."

"And you found?"

"Mostly locked drawers. But a key on my bunch opened some of these and my knife the rest. Here are the specimens of his handwriting which I collected. I doubt if you will get much out of them. I saw nothing compromising in the whole room, but then I hadn't time to go through his trunks, and one of them looked very interesting—old as the hills and—"

"You hadn't time? Why hadn't you time? What happened to cut it short?"

"Well, sir, I'll tell you." The tone in which this was said roused me if it did not the inspector. "I had just on some object which roused all his passions, and he broke into loud exclamations ending in groans. Finally he fell to kissing this object with a fervor suggesting rage and a rage suggesting tenderness carried to the point of agony. I have never heard the like. My curiosity was so aroused that I was on the point of risking everything for a look, when he gave a sudden snarl and cried out loud enough for me to hear: 'Kiss what I've hated? That is as bad as to kill what I've loved.' Those were the words. I am sure he said kiss, and I am sure he said kill."

"This is very interesting. Go on with your story. Why didn't you collar him while he was in this mood? You would have won by the surprise."

"I had no pistol, sir, and he had. I heard him cock it. I thought he was going to take his own life and held my breath for the report, but nothing like that was in his mind. Instead he laid the pistol down and deliberately tore in two the object of his anger. Then with a smothered curse he made for the door and turret staircase."

"I was for following, but not till I had seen what he had destroyed in such an excess of feeling. I thought I knew, but I wanted to feel sure. So before risking myself in the turret I crept to the room he had left and felt about on the floor till I came upon these."

"A torn photograph! Mrs. Fairbrother's?"

"Yes. Have you not heard how he loved her? A foolish passion, but evidently sincere and—"

"Never mind comments, Sweetwater. Stick to facts."

"I will, sir. They are interesting enough. After I had picked up these scraps I stole back to the turret staircase. And here I made my first break. I stumbled in the darkness, and the man below heard me, for the pistol clicked again. I did not like this, and had some thoughts of backing out of my job. But I didn't. I merely waited till I heard his step again. Then I followed."

"But very warily this time. It was not an agreeable venture. It was like descending into a well with possible death at the bottom. I could see nothing and presently could hear nothing but the almost imperceptible sliding of my own fingers down the curve of the wall, which was all I had to guide me. Had he stopped midway and would my first intimation of his presence be the touch of cold steel or the flinging around me of two murderous arms? I had met with no break in the smooth surface of the wall, so could not have reached the second story. When I should get there the question would be whether to leave the staircase and seek him in the mazes of its great rooms or to keep on down to the parlor floor and so to the street, whither he was possibly bound. I own that I was almost tempted to turn on my light and have done with it, but I remembered of how little use I should be to you lying in this well of a stairway with a bullet in me, and so I managed to compose myself and go on as I had begun. Next instant my fingers slipped round the edge of an opening, and I knew that the moment of decision had come. Realizing that no one can move so softly that he will not give away his presence in some way, I paused for the sound which I knew must come, and when a click rose from the depths of the hall before me I plunged into that hall and thus into the house proper."

"Here it was not so dark, yet I could between a table and a desk and the desk was not high enough to reach the shaft. If I could turn it on might be some hope. But look feasible. However, my coat and went at the vengeance, and, whether I was perhuman power or whether thing was not as heavy as did finally succeed in turning close under the opening the shaft rose. The next I got on its top. That seemed impossible as climbing the itself, but presently I became of the drawers, and, though locked, I did succeed by the keys to get enough of the make for myself a very good stairs.

"I could now see my mouth of the shaft, but Taking out my knife, I felt it was a good one. So was but was it good enough to in plaster? It depended upon the plaster. Had the finishing that shaft any the poor wretch who one have to pit his life against the final covering dig at it would tell. I bled violently at the prospect that first test would wonder if the perspiration felt starting at every pore suit of the effort I had been or just plain fear."

"Inspector, I do not intend to live with me through the hours which followed. I was able to pierce that plaster knife and even to penetrate enough to afford a place for my fingers and afterward for my toes, digging, prying, panting, listening, first for opening of the doors beneath some shout or wicked cry from above as I worked inch by inch, foot by foot might not be safety aftertained."

"Five hours—six. Then something which proved to be a dow, and when I realized knew that with but one more should breathe freely again near falling as I had at before I began this terrible climb."

"Happily, I had some premy danger and threw myself sition which held me till the ute passed. which both body and nerve had been subjected was too much for even my

I can easily account for the last hour
because it took me that long to cut the thick paneling from the door of the closet. However, I am here now, sir, and in very much the same condition
in which I left that house. I thought my first duty was to tell you that I had seen Hiram Sears in that house last night and put you on his track."

I drew a long breath—I think the inspector did. I had been almost rigid from excitement, and I don't believe he was quite free from it either. But his voice was calmer than I expected
when he finally said:

"I'll remember this. It was a good night's work." Then the inspector put to him some questions, which seemed to fix the fact that Sears had left the house before Sweetwater did, after which he bade him send certain men to him and then go and fix himself up.

I believe he had forgotten me. I had almost forgotten myself.

CHAPTER XV.

NOT until the inspector had given several orders was I again summoned into his presence. He smiled as our eyes met, but did not allude, any more than I did, to what had just passed. Nevertheless we understood each other.

When I was again seated he took up
the conversation where we had left it.

"The description I was just about to read to you," he went on; "will you listen to it now?"

"Gladly," said I. "It is Wellgood's,
I believe."

He did not answer save by a curious glance from under his brows, but, taking the paper again from his desk,
went on reading:

"A man of fifty-five looking like one of sixty. Medium height, insignificant features, head bald save for a ring of scanty dark hair. No beard, a heavy nose, long mouth and sleepy half shut

"Forget every other duty but that of your calling until you get some definite word from me. I shall not keep you in suspense one minute longer than is absolutely necessary."

He had risen. I rose too. But I was not satisfied. I could not leave the room with my ideas (I might say with my convictions) in such a turmoil.

"Inspector," said I, "you will think me very obstinate, but all you have told me about Sears, all I have heard about him, in fact"—this I emphasized
—"does not convince me of the entire folly of my own suspicions. Indeed, I am afraid that, if anything, they are strengthened. This steward, who is a doubtful character, I acknowledge,
may have had his reasons for wishing Mrs. Fairbrother's death, may even have had a hand in the matter, but what evidence have you to show that he, himself, entered the alcove, struck the blow or stole the diamond? I have listened eagerly for some such evidence, but I have listened in vain."

"I know," he murmured, "I know.
But it will come, at least I think so."

This should have reassured me, no doubt, and sent me away quiet and happy. But something—the tenacity of a deep conviction, possibly—kept me lingering before the inspector and finally gave me the courage to say:

"I know I ought not to speak another word; that I am putting myself at a disadvantage in doing so, but I cannot help it, inspector. I cannot help it when I see you laying such stress upon the few indirect clews connecting the suspicious Sears with this crime, and ignoring the direct clews we have against one whom we need not name."

Had I gone too far? Had my presumption transgressed all bounds and would he show a very natural anger?
No; he smiled instead, an enigmatical
smile no doubt, which I found it difficult to understand, but yet a smile.

"You mean," he suggested, "that Sears' possible connection with the crime cannot eliminate Mr. Grey's very positive one. Nor can the fact that Wellgood's hand came in contact with Mr. Grey's at or near the time of the exchange of the false stone with the real make it any less evident who was the guilty author of this exchange."

The inspector's hand was on the door knob, but he dropped it at this and,
surveying me very quietly, said:

"I thought that a few days spent at the bedside of Miss Grey in the society
of so renowned and cultured a gentleman as her father would disabuse you
of these damaging suspicions."

"I don't wonder that you thought so," I burst out. "You would think so all the more if you knew how kind he can be and what solicitude he shows for

"inspector!" Then hotly, as the absurdity of the suggestion struck me
with full force: "He do this! A waiter, or, as you think, Mr. Fairbrother's steward, to be provided with so hard-
to-come-by an article as this counterpart of a great stone? Isn't that almost as incredible a supposition as any I have myself presumed to advance?"

"Possibly, but the affair is full of incredibilities, the greatest of which, to my mind, is the persistence with which you, a kind hearted enough little woman, persevere in ascribing the deepest guilt to one you profess to admire and certainly would be glad to find innocent of any complicity with a great crime."

I felt that I must justify myself.

"Mr. Durand has had no such consideration shown him," said I.

"I know, my child, I know; but the cases differ. Wouldn't it be well for you to see this and be satisfied with the turn which things have taken without continuing to insist upon involving Mr. Grey in your suspicions?"

A smile took off the edge of this rebuke, yet I felt it keenly, and only the confidence I had in his fairness as a man and public official enabled me to say:

"But I am talking quite confidentially. And you have been so good to me,
so willing to listen to all I had to say, that I cannot help but speak
my whole mind. It is my only safety valve. Remember how I have to sit in the presence of this man with my thoughts all choked up. It is killing
me. But I think I should go back content if you will listen to one more suggestion I have to make. It is my last."

"Say it. I am nothing if not indulgent."

He had spoken the word. Indulgent,
that was it. He let me speak, probably had let me speak from the first,
from pure kindness. He did not believe one little bit in my good sense or logic. But I was not to be deterred.
I would empty my mind of the ugly thing that lay there. I would leave there no miserable dregs of doubt to ferment and work their evil way with me in the dead watches of the night which I had yet to face. So I took him at his word.

"I only want to ask this. In case Sears is innocent of the crime, who wrote the warning and where did the assassin get the stiletto with the Grey arms chased into its handle? And the diamond? Still the diamond? You hint that he stole that too. That with some idea of its proving useful to him
on this gala occasion, he had provided himself with an imitation stone, setting
and all—he who has never shown, so far as we have heard, any interest in Mrs. Fairbrother's diamond, only in Mrs. Fairbrother herself. If Wellgood is Sears and Sears the medium by which the false stone was exchanged
for the real, then he made this exchange in Mr. Grey's interests and not his own. But I don't believe he had anything to do with it. I think everything goes to show that the exchange
was made by Mr. Grey himself."

"A second Daniel," muttered the inspector lightly. "Go on, little lawyer."
But, for all this attempt at banter on his part, I imagined that I saw the beginning of a very natural anxiety to close the conversation. I therefore hastened with what I had yet to say,

No beard, a heavy nose, long mouth and sleepy, half shut eyes capable of shooting strange glances. Nothing distinctive in face or figure save the depth of his wrinkles and a scarcely observable stoop in his right shoulder. Do you see Wellgood in that?" he suddenly asked.

"I have only the faintest recollection of his appearance," was my doubtful reply. "But the impression I get from this description is not exactly the one I received of that waiter in the momentary glimpse I got of him."

"So others have told me before," he remarked, looking very disappointed. "The description is of Sears given me by a man who knew him well, and if we could fit the description of the one to that of the other, we should have it easy. But the few persons who have seen Wellgood differ greatly in their remembrance of his features and even of his coloring. It is astonishing how superficially most people see a man, even when they are thrown into daily contact with him. Mr. Jones says the man's eyes are gray, his hair a wig and dark, his nose pudgy, and his face without much expression; his land- lady, that his eyes are blue, his hair, whether wig or not, a dusty auburn, and his look quick and piercing—a look which always made her afraid. His nose she don't remember. Both agree, or rather, all agree, that he wore no beard. Sears did, but a beard can be easily taken off—and all of them declare that they would know him instantly if they saw him. And so the matter stands. Even you can give me no definite description—one, I mean, as satisfactory or unsatisfactory as this of Sears."

I shook my head. Like the others, I felt that I should know him if I saw him, but I could go no further than that. There seemed to be so little that was distinctive about the man.

The inspector, hoping, perhaps, that all this would serve to rouse my memory, shrugged his shoulders and put the best face he could on the matter.

"Well, well," said he, "we shall have to be patient. A day may make all the difference possible in our outlook. If we can lay hands on either of these men"—

He seemed to realize he had said a word too much, for he instantly changed the subject by asking if I had succeeded in getting a sample of Miss Grey's writing. I was forced to say no; that everything had been carefully put away. "But I do not know what moment I may come upon it," I added. "I do not forget its importance in this investigation."

"Very good. Those lines handed up to Mrs. Fairbrother from the walk outside are the second most valuable clew we possess."

I did not ask him what the first was. I knew. It was the stiletto.

"Strange that no one has testified to that handwriting," I remarked.

He looked at me in surprise.

"Fifty persons have sent in samples of writing which they think like it," he observed; "often of persons who never heard of the Fairbrothers. We have been bothered greatly with the business. You know little of the difficulties the police labor under."

"I know too much," I sighed.

He smiled and patted me on the hand.

"Go back to your patient," he said.

The inspector's hand was on the door knob.

all about him. But I cannot get over the facts. They all point, it seems to me, straight in one direction."

"All? You heard what was said in this room—I saw it in your eye—how the man who surprised the steward in his own room last night heard him talking of love and death in connection with Mrs. Fairbrother. 'To kiss what I hate! It is almost as bad as to kill what I love'—he said something like that."

"Yes, I heard that. But did he mean that he had been her actual slayer? Could you convict him on those words?"

"Well, we shall find out. Then, as to Wellgood's part in the little business, you choose to consider that it took place at the time the stone fell from Mr. Grey's hand. What proof have you that the substitution you believe in was not made by him? He could easily have done it while crossing the room to Mr. Grey's side."

ginning of a very natural anxiety to close the conversation. I therefore hastened with what I had yet to say, cutting my words short and almost stammering in my eagerness.

"Remember the perfection of that imitation stone, a copy so exact that it extends to the setting. That shows plan—forgive me if I repeat myself—preparation, a knowledge of stones, a particular knowledge of this one. Mr. Fairbrother's steward may have had the knowledge, but he would have been a fool to have used his knowledge to secure for himself a valuable he could never have found a purchaser for in any market. But a fancier—one who has his pleasure in the mere possession of a unique and invaluable gem—ah, that is different! He might risk a crime. History tells us of several."

Here I paused to take breath, which gave the inspector a chance to say:

MAKING WATCHES.

Wonderful Feats That Are Performed
by Modern Machinery.

The rapidity with which watches are nowadays manufactured has been made possible by the ingenious machinery designed within recent years for the making of all parts of a watch. The speed with which these various parts are turned out is little short of marvelous. Great sheets of brass and steel are cut and rolled into ribbons and punched out into wheels at the rate of 10,000 a day from each punching machine. Workers drill the thirty-one holes in the roof of the watch as fast as they can count.

Brass wire glides into a machine that measures off the length of a part, turns it, puts a screw thread on each end and actually screws it in at the rate of 2,000 a day.

The screws are of such tiny size that fifty gross of them may be put in a woman's thimble, while of others there are a thousand gross to the pound.

Balances are cut from the solid steel, ground down, worked up and drilled with their twenty-five screw holes apiece at the rate of 100 wheels a day from each machine.

Wheels have their teeth cut, a couple of dozen at a time, some with from sixty to eighty teeth, at the rate of 1,200 wheels a day from each machine.

ONTARIO'S "CLAY BELT."

Seven Years Ago Men Called It
"Dead Man's Land."

Two men were returning from the West seven years ago by way of North Bay. As the train ran through the eastern section of Northern Ontario, they sat silent for several hours gazing out of the window at the endless grey rock, with its covering of scraggly pine and blackened timber standing gaunt and bare against the line of the sky.

"Dead Man's Land," exclaimed one at last.

"It will never be a country," replied the other. "It is a stone desert."

Let those men go without delay to the towns of Cochrane and Porcupine, communities which were overtaken by the disastrous fire of July, 1911, and were reduced to ruins. Let him stand on the clay hill above Lake Commando and look down on Cochrane, rising from its ashes. Hundreds of new building have been erected since the fire.

"Third Street" and "Fifth Avenue." The hundred men toiling in that trench are putting in water works and sewers. The Government employees are cutting a mile swath about the boundary to stem another tide of fire.

Twenty years from now "The Clay Belt" will look like a section of the Western part of Ontario. Most people have heard of this tract of fine farming land in a vague sort of way, but few are aware that it contains 20,000,000 acres of land which lies south of Winnipeg, 300 miles south of Edmonton, and 400 miles south of the famous Peace River country. The soil is good. It is covered with light timber, a mere corn crop in comparison with the growth which confronted Old Ontario settlers fifty years ago.

The strength of "The Clay Belt" is the fertility of the soil. It is grey clay, sandy loam and occasionally homely black muck. The proof of fertility is the abundance of clover, which never lifts its leaves except amid affluence; it grows there luxuriously on lawns, in the fields, in the swamps and on the roadsides. Timothy stands six feet high, and crops of wheat, oats and barley compare favorably this year with those of Old Ontario. Pasture is going to waste in quantities sufficient to fatten all the lean kine of Canada, and already the frontier farmers are stocking with thoroughbreds. Naturally, the stock men are those who have been in the country long enough to amass some capital. The pioneer in his cabin is thankful if he has a single cow.

A certain guide to the progress of the country is its architecture. It shows all the grades and struggles of advancement. There is the "four square" log cabin of the pioneer, with its flat roof and single window. In the older farming districts log cabins have been replaced by frame houses or more substantial dwellings of brick and stone. In the towns the types are legion. Earls Court, Toronto, in its early days could not, in variety or design, surpass the efforts of these northern home builders. But go into the centre of the town and look at the buildings. The banks, the stores, and offices are brick and stone, constructed not to weather a boom, but to last generations.

RODS FOR BATHROOM.

They Come in All Sizes to Fit Any Apartment.

The housekeeper who is in need of new bathroom fixings will be interested in the three-quarter glass towel rods which have just come out. In a small bathroom, where all the furnishings must be as small as possible, even the size of the towel rod counts. The brackets of these new rods are nickel plated on brass, which prevents them from rusting. They come in many sizes, the shortest being fifteen inches long and the longest forty-eight inches, so any woman ought to find one of the proper size to fit her bathroom.

The corner rod is another good one for a tiny room, as the bracket of this style rod is shaped so that it can be screwed into a corner. This type of rod comes from fifteen to twenty-four inches in length.

A trio of small rods only five-eighths of an inch wide are fitted to one bracket and will be found very convenient, as on these can be hung all the necessary towels as well as wash cloths. Little sets for holding soap, tumbler and six toothbrushes come in this ware and are intended for either a small or large bathroom. A neat little tumbler designed especially for a small room has a round nickel piece below through which six toothbrushes may be slipped.

The Physiotype.

This is an English invention for making pictures by impression of leaves, ferns, lace, feathers and various other objects. It depends upon the chemical action of a fine powder. The object of which a representation is to be made is placed upon white paper and pressed, either by the hand or by other means. When the object is removed no impression is visible on the paper, but upon sprinkling the powder over the paper the picture at once appears, sharply defined, and remains permanent. Sections of wood and designs of coins and medals can thus be represented, and the prints can be transferred to lithographic stone, zinc or aluminium, thus producing records from which any number of copies can be taken.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Canadian Holly.

Christmas holly grown on Vancouver Island was last Christmas shipped to all parts of the continent, and an industry has been inaugurated which promises to become more and more important in ensuing Yuletide seasons.

Orders were received from as far as Los Angeles—even in one case as far as the City of Mexico—north to Dawson City, and east to Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, while New York, Boston and Chicago received big consignments.

The industry was started some years ago by private citizens in Victoria sending sprigs of holly with the beautiful scarlet berries to friends in the east. At once there grew up a demand for more.

Florida and Georgia are the other sources of supply for the American market, but these states do not produce the evergreen in the same beautiful color as does Vancouver Island, which has the natural qualifications to produce holly in even a greater state of perfection than England.

Hog Cholera Prevention.

No specific cure has been found for hog cholera, but in a few instances recoveries have taken place where the preventive serum has been promptly used. The serum, if fresh made and from a reputable, reliable manufacturer, is effective in preventing the disease. Temporary immunity is had by the single injection treatment in which serum alone is used. Permanent immunity is had by injecting serum and a very small quantity of virulent blood at the same time.

Pumpkins For Dairy Cows.

Pumpkins are good feed for dairy cows, and there is nothing in the claim that they will dry animals up. It can be said that field pumpkins contain practically the same amount of digestible nutrients as turnips.

During the winter succulent feed is meant feed property possessed by grass. This is desirable not only for food value, but it also serves the digestive organs in good stead. In the corn belt the succulent usually is silage. Roots may be but they are more expensive silage.

The ration should contain amount of grain in proportion to amount of roughage. Roughage as hay and silage, should form the foundation for the ration. should have all this she will. The grain ration is regulated by amount of milk produced. one pound of grain for each pound of milk produced gives satisfactory results. A cow very rich milk, however, should have a little more than this amount.

In winter the cows should have dry quarters and protected from cold. The barn need not be heated but should be clean, warm and ventilated. Cold water should be given to the cows in winter, to about 65 or 70 degrees. Cows should be given one pound less of milk when forced to drink cold water.

Hogs Like Cleanliness.

When a farmer gets so standards that practically all concerning the handling of hogs successfully so as to make them comfortable in the word comfort he has whole lot, says Kansas Farming the animals comfortable keep them well fed, but no it means to give them clear sleeping quarters, with plenty of water to drink and a good place on which to eat. A hog is usually a dirty animal. He likes bath, and he likes to eat in place. If his owner deprives these things he retaliates by doing some disorder or disease that must eat in a dusty lot, in which filth has accumulated for years and where the only cleansing agencies have been the wind and rain, should not be blamed for coughing when the dust gets into his lungs or for picking up any stray germ that might be lying around. Of all the uses to which cement has been put on the farm there is perhaps none more important or more valuable than that of building a feeding floor for the hog.

Sheep Wisdom.

Good sheep are a good property at any time.

For fitting sheep for winter no better feed can be found than just plain oats.

It takes more to make a yearling lamb gain than it does one four months younger. Think always of the cost and act accordingly.

Don't send any of the lambs to market in thin condition. The buyers discriminate against them, and they go for less than their real worth.

THE SWINEHERD.

Good bedding adds to the comfort of the hogs. The man who provides the best shelter is invariably the man who makes the most money out of his hogs.

It is well to set out a row of evergreen trees to protect the hog yard, and such a windbreak for the farm buildings will make a great difference in the winter.

Separate the young breeding sows from the fattening stock. A fattening ration will ruin a sow for a breeder.

Keep a record of each sow to determine her worth as a breeder. Fatten the rattle headed sow that is hard to handle at pigging time.

Handle the young boar carefully. Teach him to obey the word and to walk ahead of you. An ungovernable boar is most dangerous.

THE AMBITIOUS HORSE.

Importance of Training Work Animals to Walk Rapidly.

Some people give horses little credit for intelligence, and, while, of course, they cannot reason or pass the time of day with one another, they do learn many things, usually from habit, says the National Stockman. Horses vary greatly in this respect, as all who have handled many horses well know. The variation of horses in this respect is probably no more, however, than the difference in the ability various men possess to handle horses.

One of the most important things a horse may be taught is to walk fast. A contractor who builds roads or does similar work has his teams trained to walk fast, and he has them all working at an even gait, which is so necessary when they are following each other closely at their work. Sometimes farmers put their teams in at such jobs, making a fill or a cut to level a road, and so earn a few extra dollars. The lessons brought out on such a job are too plain to be overlooked. The fast teams must wait for the slow,

A Benevolent Innovation.

Just at the present time when everybody in Western Canada is counting the big profits he has made in 1912 Sir Donald Mann's typical story may well be told. He relates how a man in British Columbia met a man from Alberta and the two fell into conversation on the usual topics. It is said that there are only two subjects of conversation in the West, wheat and city lots. However, this particular talk became more general and turned on the relative merits of the two provinces.

The man from British Columbia dilated upon the wonderful natural resources of that province. Any man who could work was sure to become rich in a very short time. Any man with a little capital could become a millionaire with equal rapidity.

The Alberta man admitted that British Columbia was a fine province, but he was bound to maintain the superiority of his own.

"Yes," he said, "men get rich in Alberta without working."

"But what's farming if it isn't work?"

"No," he persisted, "the farmers have very little real work to do. It began to be middling easy when the gang-plow and the self-binder came in. But the gasoline engine—"

He paused to see if the British Columbian was "getting him."

"Yes?"

"The gasoline engine has made plowing, seeding and harvesting a real recreation—"

"Go on. You're doing well."

"Why—on some of the big farms they're building gymnasiums so that the hired men may be able to get exercise!"

The "Last House."

An effort is to be made to preserve an historic old structure known as "the last house in the world" and which is located at Edmonton, Alta. This building, or group of buildings, is known as Fort Edmonton and for years was the only structure in this northern outpost of civilization. It was formerly owned by the Hudson Bay Co. and the original fort standing on the spot was built in the latter part of the 18th century. It was named Fort Edmonton by one of the leading men in the Hudson Bay Co., after his birthplace in England. The leader in the movement to preserve the old fort is a prominent club woman of Edmonton, Mrs. Arthur Murphy. She will bring a proposition before the Provincial Legislature next spring to restore the historic structure by using original materials. The fort occupies a prominent place on Parliament Hill at Edmonton.

Popular Bibles.

When Inspector MacDonald, of Calgary, was a plain policeman in the Northwest Mounted Police, and seeking a chance for promotion, he noticed one day on a Canadian Pacific train a traveler appearing to bite a Bible, highly tooled in gold. On closer investigation he discovered that he was mistaken—the man was drinking from it—not words of wisdom, but something of a liquid nature. The drinker, looking up, tried guiltily to hide—not the Truth, but what resembled it. MacDonald's curiosity was not to be denied, and the "book" was produced, as fine an imitation as could be desired and containing a very good brand of imitation whisky, the sale of which in the then Territories was without the pale.

FEARED HE HAD CONSUMPTION

"Fruit-a-lives" Cured Him

HUGH McKENNA, Esq.

ST. STEPHEN, N.B. Jan. 17th. 1911.

"I wish to tell you of the great good "Fruit-a-lives" have done for me. For years, I was a martyr to Chronic Constipation and Stomach Trouble. I was greatly run down and my friends feared I had Consumption. I tried numerous doctors and all kinds of medicines, but received no relief until advised to try "Fruit-a-lives" by Mr. McCready of St. Stephen, and am pleased to say that I now enjoy excellent health. "Fruit-a-lives" are the best medicine made, and I strongly advise my friends to use them".

HUGH McKENNA.

"Fruit-a-lives" is the only medicine that will positively and completely cure Constipation. This wonderful compound of fruit juices acts directly on the liver, causing this organ to extract more bile from the blood, and to give up more bile to move the bowels regularly and naturally.

SOME LAMP LORE.

Rub Off Top of Wick Daily With Soft Paper.

Despite the reign of the electrolux, the lamp still has many followers. Many take to lamps because they must, some because the light it sheds is softer, more becoming and better for the eyes.

When a lamp fails to give a good light do not waste time reviling the manufacturer, but look to your own duties.

Perhaps the wick is crooked or too short or not in squarely. Rub off the top of the wick each day with soft paper and if it fails to draw pull it up on the catches or get a new one. Unless sure you can put in the wick correctly send the lamp to a store and have it done properly.

Perhaps a new wick is less necessary than removing the oil with which it is clogged. Boil the wick in vinegar and water and dry thoroughly.

Fill your lamps daily. Never light a lamp that is nearly empty, as it increases danger of explosion. Fill a lamp by daylight. If it must be done after dark keep away from a flame and

The policy of keeping brood mares
to perform the necessary farm work
and at the same time produce a crop of foals is one that should commend itself to all thinking men.
Mares of good conformation, bone
and size mated to pure bred draft stallions will produce a type of horse much in demand at excellent prices. None but pure bred stallions of any of the recognized draft breeds should be used. Keeping the brood mares steadily at work results in stronger and better foals.

to pride in a slow moving team, nor is it a credit to the ability of the team's owner to train his horses.

Some horses are naturally slower gaited than others, and many acquire a lagging gait because the driver permits it. Some teams with one driver will step off smart and fast, but with another will quickly learn that
to just move is all that is required,
the driver probably having his mind anywhere but on his work. We can hardly blame the slow moving laggard
of a horse for his fault.

A too common mistake is hitching
an ambitious colt with a lazy old horse.
When this is done it is generally because the slow one is "so gentle," so nice to work a colt beside, but the result is almost ruinous to the colt
so far as a fast, efficient worker is concerned. The difference in the amount of work a fast stepping team
and a slow team will do is astounding
and will hardly be believed until seen demonstrated, as in adjoining wheat-fields of the same size, where the well trained team will reap the wheat much faster than and seemingly as easy as the slow team. At least at the end of a day's work they seem no more tired than the laggards. Give the colt a chance to be an efficient horse.

The German I and You.

It is surprising when any one takes the trouble to notice how many letters begin with the pronoun "I." To Germans this is egotistical, and their etquette in letter writing forbids it. It is probably on the same principle that they write I (ch) always with a small letter and you (Sie) with a capital, reversing the English custom.

MacDonald's curiosity was not to be denied, and the "book" was produced, as fine an imitation as could be desired and containing a very good brand of imitation whisky, the sale of which in the then Territories was without the pale.

The source of publication was sought and one hundred and fifty bibles were found in the care of the news agent, which MacDonald took out of circulation.

When it became quite safe and legal
to sell the real liquor in the Territories, the old-timers longed for the old order of things, when they used to get whisky with some fire to it.

I Will Stake This Medicine Against Your Time

A Few Days Will Be Sufficient to Prove That You Are Curable

A few minutes of your time for a few days and I will demonstrate to you, without expense to yourself,
that I have a medicine that drives
Uric Acid poison from the system
and by so doing cures kidney trouble, bladder trouble and rheumatism.
I don't ask you to take my word for it, but simply want you to let me
send you some of this medicine so that you can use it personally.

I am trying to convince sufferers
from these diseases that I have something far better than the usual run of remedies, treatments and such things,
and the only way I can demonstrate that fact is to go to the expense of compounding the medicine and sending it out free of charge. This I am glad to do for any sufferer who will take the time to write me. Understand, I will not send you a so-called "sample,
proof or test treatment," nor will I send you a package of medicine and say that you can use some of it and pay for the rest, but I will send you a supply free of charge and you will not be asked to pay for this gift nor will you be under any obligations.

All I want to know is that you have a disease for which my medicine is intended, and it is not a "run-all," and I give herewith some of the leading symptoms of kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles. If you notice one or more of these symptoms you need this medicine, and I will be glad to send you some of it if you will write me the numbers of the symptoms you have,
give your age, and your name and address. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynnott, 843 Franklin Building, Toronto, Ont. You promise me nothing; you pay me nothing for it. All I ask, so there shall be no mistake, is that you send me
the numbers of your symptoms or a description in your own words, and that you take the medicine according to the directions I send you. It is my way of getting publicity for my medicine so that it will become widely known.

You will agree when you have used
it that it dissolves and drives out uric acid poison. It tones the kidneys so that they work in harmony with the bladder. It strengthens the bladder so that frequent desire to urinate and other urinary disorders are banished.
It stops rheumatic aches and pains immediately. It dissolves uric acid crystals so that back and muscles no longer
ache and crooked joints quickly straighten out. It reconstructs the blood and nerves so that you soon feel healthier and more vigorous, sleep better and eat better and have energy throughout the day. It does all this,
and yet contains nothing injurious and is absolutely vouched for according to law.

Sufferers from these dreadful and dangerous diseases can surely afford to spend a few minutes each day for a water and dry thoroughly.

Fill your lamps daily. Never light a lamp that is nearly empty, as it increases danger of explosion. Fill a lamp by daylight. If it must be done after dark keep away from a flame and wipe all oil from the outside.

Even with the best oil a poor light results if the burner is not clean. It should be washed once a month in a quart of cold water to which have been added a tablespoonful of washing soda
and a little soap. Boil several hours, pour off the blackened water, cover
with fresh boiling water, soap and soda, boil five minutes, rinse in clean
hot water and rub dry with a clean
soft cloth that is not linty.

Lamp chimneys may be rubbed off
with soft paper daily and when smoked should be washed in hot ammonia water, rinsed in cold water and polished
with a tea towel and soft paper.

out without cost, obligation or important loss of time. THESE FEW DAYS
may be the turning point in your life.

All who are interested enough to write me for the free medicine will also receive a copy of my large illustrated medical book which describes these diseases thoroughly. It is the largest book of the kind ever written for free distribution, and a new edition is just being printed. I will also write you a letter of diagnosis and medical advice that should be of great help to you; but in order to do this I must know that you need my medicine. Write me the numbers of the symptoms that trouble you, and your age, and I will promptly carry out my promise. Show an inclination to be cured and you will

These Are the Symptoms:

NAPANEE, ONT.

Dear Miss Baughan,

The teachers, officers and scholars of Trinity Sunday School have learned with deep regret that you are about to leave Napanee for an indefinite length of time and so must sever your connection with the Sunday School for the time being.

We could not allow this separation to take place without assuring you of our appreciation of the valuable service that you have rendered the school as pianist for so many years. You have been regular in attendance, faithful in the discharge of the duties of your position and have always been willing to contribute in every way possible to the musical service of the School, and in which you have shown marked ability.

We trust that wherever you may be you may find a sphere of usefulness in some department of church work.

We ask your acceptance of this club bag as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held and of our appreciation of the valuable service you have rendered Trinity Sunday School in the position that you have filled.

Signed on behalf of the School.

Trinity Church Notes.

The attendance at the service last Sunday morning was exceptionally large. Four members were received into the Church. On Monday Miss Dickey gave a very eloquent address on "The Movement," before the Young Association, tracing the history of the movement from the beginning of the present suffragette agitation. A large audience that filled the School Hall was greatly interested with the address. Next morning Rev. J. P. Wilson, B. A. Church, will give an address. Sunday the pastor will preach on "The Church in the World," a very promising young preacher will occupy the pulpit morning. At the quarterly office on Tuesday evening the church received a very cordial invitation to the second year.

Kingston vs. Napanee.

Wednesday evening the Napanee Senior Hockey Club played their first game of the season and won out by a score of 12—4. Their opponents were a Kingston team composed of employ- ees of the London Life Insurance Company. The score does not repre- sent the equality of the players as the game was evenly contested from start to finish and had the Kingston goal tender been on his game the score would have been much closer. Bab- cock in goal for Napanee played a splendid game, while Campbell, Davey and Stainsbury featured for the visi- tors. G. B. Curran made an efficient referee.

Following are the players :

Napanee—Babcock, goal ; Allison, point ; Kedey, C point ; Soby, rover Oldham, centre ; Blute, L wing ; Hawley Steacy, R wing.

Kingston—Steward, goal ; Williams point ; Campbell, C point ; Davey, rover ; Stanisbury, centre ; Crawford, L wing ; Sleeman, R wing.

W. C. T. U.

One of the evils of modern life, against which the W. C. T. U. all over Canada is struggling with increasing persistence, is the white slave traffic. This social disorder is one of the most insidious because, like to some of the more malignant forms of cancer, it has succeeded in getting its roots firmly imbedded before showing any outward visible sign of its presence. As more of this social evil has become known, so more means by which to grapple with it have been found. Among other precautions the W. C. T. U., of Guelph, has strongly advised mothers to keep their young daughters from loitering around the station, as stations are one of the many hunting grounds of the procurer. Mrs. Hyslop, of Toronto, who was present at the meeting where the Guelph W. C. T. U. resolved to send such a warning to the local press, urged that every ing possible be done by the W. C. T. U. to bring about woman's suffrage as the surest way to cope with this social evil. Knowing, as we do, that one of the most powerful agencies working into the hands of the White Slave Traffickers is the wretched economical position of women, a position which nothing but the possession of the ballot by women can remedy. It is quite evident to an thoughtful mind that Mrs. Hyslop's suggestion is one which goes to the root of the evil, even more surely than does the surgeon's knife in the case of the physical cancer to which we have compared the social evil.
